Mujer Digna

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY · OCTOBER 9, 2026

National Program for Autonomy, Protection and Opportunities for Venezuelan Women. A cross-cutting strategy of Venezuela Digna so that women can live safely, choose their path, learn, provide care with support and build progress for their families.

An initiative of Despierta Venezuela Inc.
Venezuelans first, not politicians.

Updated version available for review in preview. The summary presents the proposal; it does not certify active services or committed resources.

Mujer Digna

Identity and purpose

Mujer Digna has its own identity within a project promoted by Despierta Venezuela Inc.
Connect autonomy, protection, and opportunities with the country's reconstruction. Share the principles of service, human dignity, family, and freedom of conscience of Venezuela Digna. Aid will not be conditioned on religious affiliation, political affiliation, or public disclosure of personal experiences.

A route chosen by each woman

The program aims to identify general capabilities, preferences, and barriers in order to agree on a flexible, adaptable pathway. Participants may prioritize protection, health, learning, work, entrepreneurship, or caregiving. Receiving guidance should not force them to start a business, take on debt, or abandon family responsibilities. Progress will be evaluated based on agreed-upon goals, continuity, and effective responses.

Seven complementary components

Safe Woman

Accessible guidance and connection to specialized protection, legal aid, health, and psychosocial support. Referrals must verify availability and continuity. Sensitive accounts will not be required on public pages, nor will professional decisions be assigned to VEN or volunteers.

Working Woman

Skills assessment, preparation for seeking opportunities, and placement with verified vacancies. Conditions, schedules, and requirements must be clearly defined; employers retain their decision-making power. Job placement is not guaranteed.

Women Entrepreneurs

Business diagnostics, mentoring, cost organization, digital tools, and relevant formalization. Proposed financing depends on feasibility, repayment capacity, confirmed regulations, and available resources. This support does not constitute loan approval.

Woman Cares and Progresses

Care for Growth, co-responsibility and respite support through appropriate and safe provision.
Early childhood, disability, and older adults require different approaches. Capacity, quality, continuity, and complaint mechanisms must be verified before announcing availability.

Woman Learns

Accessible training connected to the participant's preferences and verifiable opportunities.
The itineraries must take into account schedules, connectivity, safety, prior learning, and certification requirements. Registration, attendance, and demonstrated skills will be measured separately.

Women's Health and Wellbeing

Coordination of access to primary care, prevention, maternal health, and mental health services according to network capacity. Individual needs are addressed by healthcare professionals. Appointments, effective care, and continuity of care will be distinguished; VEN does not diagnose or prescribe.

Women Leaders

Mentoring, valuable networks, and community, professional, and productive service-oriented projects. Participation from academia, businesses, and the diaspora must have verifiable objectives and prevent conflicts of interest. Public recognition and testimonials will be voluntary.

How is access to be organized?

The Mujer Digna 's Centers would connect guidance and service providers, preferably using existing capacities. The Mujer Digna 's Pathway would allow for the agreement of objectives, referrals, and follow-up. The Women Entrepreneurs Mechanism would require financial rules and its own evaluation. Care for Growth would facilitate balancing family decisions, studies, and work with secure support. No instrument will be presented as operational without resources, staff, and confirmed agreements.

Preparation, pilots and expansion

First, territorial needs must be identified, service providers mapped, competencies defined, costs calculated, and access and protection criteria agreed upon. Pilot programs should assess referrals, service capacity, and continuity of care. Expansion will depend on evaluated results, recurring resources, and quality standards; not solely on applications, openings, or enrollments.

Results, control and data protection

The evaluation will examine effective access, remaining barriers, continuity of learning, working conditions, business viability, quality of care, and sustained projects. Indicators will require validated definitions, baselines, and targets. Public monitoring will use aggregated information; sensitive records will remain under competent custody.
Testimonials and photographs will require separate authorization from access to the program.

Responsible partnerships and funding

Cooperation among institutions, service providers, businesses, academia, communities, and the diaspora is proposed through agreements that define contributions and obligations. Subsidies, operations, loans, and guarantees must be clearly separated. The budget will include personnel, accessibility, technology, supervision, and maintenance. No guarantees of available funds, guaranteed places, or third-party commitments are made.

What the revised edition adds

The 39-page document retains the core content and expands upon 24 central themes through 129 additional sections covering actions, responsibilities, stages, measurement, risks, and limitations. Historical figures and pending assumptions require verification before being used as current data. This summary provides a brief overview and does not replace the full technical documentation.

Learn about the full program

The detailed edition can be requested along with Venezuela Digna through a single registration on the Plan País form. The required fields and the privacy and intellectual property checkboxes must be completed to enable both downloads. VEN provides guidance on the content but does not replace specialized services.
